New Talent Revives Interest in Nationals: Rain Postpones Championship Tennis Events:

Life's Darkest Moment.

WOODWARD IS CHEERED DESPITE BEING POUNDED

Fans Protest Pitcher's Removal, but Wisdom of Act Is Shown by 7=6 Win of Griffs Over Macks in Ten Innings.

BY DENMAN THOMPSON.

HAT base ball interest in the capital is far from dead despite the recent sorry showing of the Nationals and the fact that the season has but three weeks to run, was convincingly demonstrated at the Florida avenue plant yesterday when a crowd of close to 10,000 was agreeably surprised at seeing the Athletics upset, 7-6, in a ten-inning game that had much to recommend it from a spectator's standpoint.

There is little question that many of the fans were attracted by the announcement that Frank Woodward would decorate the pitcher's box for the first time in a Washington uniform, and, in view of what developed in the course of the afternoon, there can be no doubt in the mind of President Griffith or Manager McBride that the supporters of the club want to see new blood injected into the line-up—and left there regardless of what happens.

Two in a Row

WASHINGTON.

Woodward's debut was not what might be termed eminently successful. The first ball he pitched was soaked to left center for three bases by Witt, who subsequently scored. Another pair of bingles, with a couple of passes, netted the aliens a trio of fifth and sixth for single counters, the last of these offsetting the terrific lacing Bryan Harris had been subjected to in the first two frames.

Although the New Haven rookle had been hammered in hard and timely fashion, and it was the part of good judgment to lift him with the score tied when a hit meant a run, the fans lustily voiced their disapproval when Brower was announced to bat for Woodward with a runner on second in the sixth round, and it was not so many weeks ago that they yelled for Turkey to be produced on overy possible occasion. Then, when "Old Home Folks" Zachary entered the box the conscientious and hardworking southpaw was greeted with Protest Lifting of Woodward. working southpaw was greeted with booes and hisses. working southpaw was greeted with booes and hisses. It is probable the displeasure of the crowd was not a manifestation of its feeling toward Jezebel, but a protest against the lifting of Woodward. Zach demonstrated the wisdom of McBride's course by hurling a glit-edge brand of base ball, yielding but two scattered singles in the four frames he toiled and fully deserved the victory which was credited to him.

Unjustified as the action of the crowd seemed it served to prove be pond any question that the base ball going public of the capital demands that newly acquired talent be given a chance to prove its worth, McBride will not be censured by the fans if he makes use of all the youngs'ers who report to him in what remains of the campaign. regardless of the managerial estimate of their prowess. The fans know what the present gang is capable of and they want to see for themselves what the kids can do.

Miller's Swat Decides It.

Rice shared honors with Judge on the offensive yesterday, each driving in three runs and personally scoring another, but in handing out the bouquets Miller cannot be overlooked, for it was Bing who produced the swat that meant victory for the Nationals. With the induction of Rommell, starting with the third inning, the Griffs' early punch completely disappeared. For seven rounds they were practically helpless.

Nationals chalking up a pair of tallies in their half. Bush led off by beating out a bunt Perkins made a fine play on. He streaked to third on Milan's double to right center and scored with Zeb when Judge rammed a safety to right.

The A's again forged to the front in the second, when some well conceived Griffithian strategy went astray. Collins drew a walk at the outset, McCann scratched a hit on a bunt toward Judge and Galloway advanced them via the sacrifice route. Johnny Walker was purposely passed here, filling the bases and bringing up the light-hitting Bryan Harris. The sought-for dual killing was in sight when the altitudinous finger rolled softly toward second, but Stan Harris momentarily fumbled. MIDGET NINES TO CLASH FOR TITLE AT A. L. PARK

INWORTH ATHLETIC CLUB of Southwest Washington and Warwick Athletic Club of the northeast section will meet at American League Park Thursday afternoon in the decisive game of the series for the midget independent sandlot base ball championship of the District. President Griffith of the Nationals offered the grounds for the titular tilt, and through Chairman Jack Haas of the executive committee in charge of the series extended an invitation to the seven sectional winners in the sandlot tournament to attend the game between the Nationals

In the next round the visitors knotted the count and ended the regime of Woodward. Collins rifled a safety to conter at the outset, ambled to the midway on McCann's act of self-abnegation and, after Galloway popped to Shanks, reached the counting block by reason of a real jolt to right by J. Walker, which was registered as a double when the ball caromed off Milan's shins. Rommell left Walker on second.

After round 2, with Ed Rommell on the slab, the Nationals failed to get anywhere until the fatal tenth. Three scattered singles represented the efforts of the locals in Rommell's first five sessions, while a Texas League double by Miller in the eighth and Milan's safety in the ninth were unsupported.

MEMPHIS, Tenn., September 12.—
Arrangements for the post-season series between the pennant winners in the Southern Association and the Texas League will be completed this week, according to John D. Martin, president of the Southern Association. Memphis and Forth Worth are each within one victory of the pennant in their respective leagues and it is practically certain that they will be opponents in the post-season series, iresident Martin said he would make t Doak Roberts, president of the Texas League, at Texarkana Tuesday or Wednesday to draw up the agreement for the series. It is said to be probable that the series will open September 23 and be for the best five out of nine games. The location of the first game will be decided by the toss of a coin.

Considering that the game went into overtime and the amount of scoring done, it was one of the shortest played at American League Park this season, requiring but a little more than an hour and a half.

Bryan Harris had a distinctly off day. The bean-pole hurler usually gives the Griffmen all kinds of trouble, but he resembled the veriest busher yesterday, yielding seven hits and half a dozen runs in the two frames he was allowed to linger.

The Nationals again turned in an errorless game, their second in succession, and have made twenty-seven hits in them. Good pitching is all Mc-Bride's aggregation needs. Yesterday marked the fifteenth extra-inning game the Nationals have played this year. One of them, with the Mackmen, in April, was a tie.

They have won seven and lost as many of the others.

The crowd voiced hearty approval when the defeat of the Yankees by Boston was recorded and cheered the posting of runs for the Indians. The New York club is far from popular with capital fans.

The figures have given a very satisfactory line on Ruth's home run ability this year when they were properly applied. Back in the middle of the summer they pointed to the fact that Ruth would surely the his home run record and he has.

They also indicated that he might make sixty home runs. They still point the same way. For that matter, they point to a little better mark. If he keeps going as he has been going all of the summer, and the spring before the summer, he should make sixty-four home runs.

Both have back practically their whole 1920 eleven while the University of Georgia is to lose only two, and neither of those regulars. both Princeton and the Navy that players of the two elevens which are to meet at Annapolis next October, as well as coaches of both teams, are looking forward to this contest in a spirit which affords a sharp contrast to the friendliness and lack of mental strain which are characterizing arrangements between West Point and Yale for their big game at the bowl part month.

The whole matter dates back to the game of 1920, in which a writer in a Princeton publication charged Navy players with undue roughness. Commander Douglas Howard of the academy took the matter up with Princeton. Disclaimers from the Princeton coach and players were immediately forthcoming. This proved satisfactory to the Navy crowd and a threatened break in all athletic relations did not materialize.
